Hundred Chart Description

This Hundred Chart is set up using “Daddy numbers” at the top.

When a girl gets married, her husband’s last name becomes her last name. All of their children have that same last name.

The number families are the same. For example, any number in the 20’s family has the name twenty in it. However, we say the last name first (twenty-two, twenty-five, etc.)

The teen family is a little different. We say “teen” after each number. For example, four-teen, six-teen, nine-teen. There are a few exceptions with the numbers 11 and 12.

Description of the Daddies:

Teen – The Teen Daddy wants to be a teenager again. He loves to wear a t-shirt and a ball cap and order pizza.

Twenty – The Twenty Daddy is still in college. He studies hard and needs to wear his glasses to read his textbooks.

Thirty – The Thirty Daddy has a family and a job. He has grown a mustache.

Forty – The Forty Daddy is getting older and wants to feel young again. He has a Mohawk cut in his hair and has a fast sports car.

Fifty – The Fifty Daddy loves the fifties time period. He loves to dress like Elvis.

Sixty – The Sixty Daddy loves the sixties time period. He likes to dress like a “hippie.”

Seventy – The Seventy Daddy has retired. He doesn’t have to go to work every day. Instead, he loves to go fishing.

Eighty – The Eighty Daddy is getting older. He needs to use a cane to walk around.

Ninety – The Ninety Daddy is really old. He needs to use a wheelchair to get around.

County by 10’s:

To count by tens, just say the Daddy numbers.

Counting by 5’s:

When you count by fives, you need to say a Daddy number and then a middle number (pink box on chart). The daddy is the head of the household. Point to your head when you say a daddy number. Your tummy is in the middle of your body. [Draw a number five on your child’s tummy.] Point to your tummy when you say one of the fives. For example, 10 (point to head), 15 (point to tummy), 20 (point to head), 25 (point to tummy), etc..
